Stress Marks

This mark indicates that the preceding syllable receives the primary stress. For example, in the word lineage, the first syllable is stressed: [lǐnˈeɪdʒ].

This mark is used only in words in which more than one syllable is stressed. It indicates that the preceding syllable is stressed, but somewhat more weakly than the syllable receiving the primary stress. In the word consumerism, for example, the second syllable receives the primary stress, and the fourth syllable receives a weaker stress: [ˌkənsəˈmərɪzəm].
